

Thank you for your interest in the University of North Florida (UNF) College of Health (COH) Master of Science in Health (MSH): Nutrition/Internship program. Successful completion of our 15-month program will provide you with a Master's Degree in Health Sciences, with a specialization in Nutrition, and will enable you to sit for the dietetic registration exam. Furthermore, we believe that you will find the combination of classroom learning and clinical experience ideal for developing a solid foundation in dietetics practice.

In response to your information request, please check out our UNF BCH website @ <http://www.unf.edu/brooks>. On the website you will find a description of our MSH Nutrition/Internship. In addition, there is also a sample rotation schedule to give you a sense of the courses and field experiences in which you will be involved. We have an exciting group of clinical, foodservice and community placements and our preceptors are simply outstanding. There is also information on the application process and program costs for your review. Pursuing a Masters degree in addition to an internship may be a more costly option; however, being a Masters level dietitian will truly put you in the forefront of the field. The number and types of jobs for which you will be qualified will be greater. We hope you will seriously consider UNF as the next step in your professional preparation. All applications are submitted through the UNF Admissions Office. You may apply by clicking "APPLY ON-LINE" or print out the application from the "ADMISSIONS" link. Should you have any questions or need additional information after researching the website please feel free to contact Dr. Christie, the program director, or me, and we would be happy to assist you.

Thank you,
