- ❖❖ Spend five weeks in Santander, Spain
- ❖❖ Study Spanish with native speakers and live with a Spanish family
- ❖❖ Recommended for students who have completed the intermediate level in Spanish

Overview

The Spanish Study Abroad Program at the University of Cantabria in Santander offers students a language and culture immersion experience at one of the top universities in Spain, recognized as a Campus of International Excellence by the Spanish Government in 2009. The program consists of five weeks in Santander, during which the students take an intensive language course taught by accredited instructors from the University of Cantabria, and a three-credit-hour culture class with a UNF faculty member. Students will earn six hours of credit for the completion of the two courses. Participants must be at least 18 years old.

Santander, Spain

Santander is a city located in the North of Spain, of approximately 180,000 people, that extends over a wide bay. The city of Santander is a popular destination for many Spaniards during the summer months because of its proximity to the ocean and the numerous cultural activities available to visitors. It is 212 miles from Madrid and 436 miles from Barcelona.

The Academic Program

Students will enroll in two classes above the intermediate level: Intensive Spanish Language and Spanish Culture. These courses are taught exclusively for UNF students. Both courses will transfer to UNF as study abroad credit. The Program Director and the Chair of the Department of Languages, Literatures and Cultures, in consultation with the International Center, will assign UNF equivalencies to the courses taken during the study abroad program in Santander.

The students' immersion experience will continue outside the classroom through family homestays, which helps them enhance their conversational skills and engage in the daily life and customs of local Spaniards. Families provide three meals a day (breakfast, lunch and dinner).
