

Agency Fund

Definition: Funds held or generated for reimbursement of specific expenditures for activities such as Study Abroad Programs, field trips, and other ‘flow – through’ activities. These funds are held for others for which the University acts as custodian or fiscal agent on behalf of the payer. Agency activities are not subject to the University overhead assessment.

Source:

(1) Scholarship or financial aid deposits: there are funds provided by individuals, companies, civic organizations, church groups, other groups, state government, and the federal government for the purpose of awarding scholarships to students. The determination of which students receive scholarship is made by the external agency or in accordance with the agency agreement.

(2) Student travel program

(3) Funds for specific purpose: there are funds that have been deposited by students, student organizations, faculty organizations, employee organizations, or others. The funds are disbursed in accordance with specific instructions from the owners or in accordance with the term of the agency agreement.

In addition to traditional funds described above, institutions may elect to establish an agency fund for fees charged for meetings, seminars, training sessions, and workshops to cover incidental costs such as meals, use of facilities, training materials, and refreshments. Fee rates must be established to cover only the costs of the particular event. The account balance should be kept to minimum, and balance on hand at June 30th, if inordinately large, may need to be transferred.

(4) Funds for specific purpose: reserved for use by the controllers office to monitor collection, loss management, and other deposit accounts.

An agency agreement should be made for each agency fund.

Accounting Principles

The assets of the agency fund group include cash, temporary investments, and amounts due from other fund groups. Balances for this fund group will be carried as a liability (account 231003) on the trial balance. Receipts and disbursements of these are accordingly classified as additions to, and deductions from the liability account rather than as revenues and expenditures which will affect fund balance.
